It will stand about as before, or av 44 Unionists to 11 Conservatives. Thus we see that after all the talk, and all the roostering and hurrahing of the Democratic organs, they have actually gained nothing in the Legisla-ture, but more likely are shorter than ever of Representatives, and certainly they had none to spare. It might be said of the few they have, as one of the Southern Senators once said of Seward, Hale and Sumner, that they do not belong to any healthy political organiza-tion, and therefore it was not worth while to place them on committees.

English Opinion of Grant and Chase as Candidates.

From the London Times, Get. 15.

The battle of parties in the United States is concentrating itself more and more closely around the office of the Executive.

* * It is easy for the majority to find fault with Mr. Johnson, but it is not so easy for them to decide upon his successor. They have some men within their ranks whose claims for support cannot be safely set.

Both East and West the reports are blue in regard to business matters. We can hardly realize it here in Wheeling, for, according to all we can hear and read, our town contrasts favorably with read, our town contrasts favorably with many other places. It is probable that Wheeling was never in better general trim than she is to-day. Of course the state of the river and depression elsewhere, cuts down and curtails trade, and they are further perplexed and yet we hear but little complaint in come men within their ranks whose claims for support cannot be safely set iside, and they are further perpiexed by the fact that the probable candidate of the people is not, for many reasons, wholly a canable in them. A remain In New York city we should judge that they are passing through an ordeal of a very severe and trying character. The Express newspaper, in its summary What removes the Dandruff?

aside, and they are arrived probable candidate of the people is not, for many reasons, wholly acceptable to them. Around General Grant half the interest of the contest lies. He would be invaluable to the democrats, but he is a positive necessity to the republicans. If the necessity to the republicans. If the latter were to press him by, the former would at once be provided with a stronger man than any they have within their own party. Hence it is that both are coqueting for the favorite General. It is possible that meanwhile the people may look in a different direction altogether. We should absurdly underrate the ability of the public men of America II we supposed that no civilian could be found who seemed to possess all the essential qualifications for an office which, though weakened and degraded, is still important. There are many such men from whom the nation may choose, and foremost of last week's trade, speaks thus: of last week's trade, speaks thus:

"There has been a general decline in merchandise since our last report—in some cases quite marked, and the end is not apparently yet reached. Goods are rapidly approaching a specie basis, with over seven hundred millions of paper money in circulation, and from this our readers can form some idea of the depression in trade circles. We regret to see that mercantile credit has been gradually sinking of late, and the merchants have experienced much more difficulty in procuring discounts than for a long time past. This only adds to the prevailing dullness, and assists the general market in its downward course."

The Cincinnsii Gazette of yesterday, the nation may choose, and foremost among them stands the former Secretary of the Treasury and the present Cnief Justice of the Supreme Court. Through an era which has been destructive of many reputations Mr. Chase has passed almost unscathed. The organs of both parties admit that he is a man of learning, and his career has been along training for the highest office in the republic. The merits of such an officers this are not likely to be disregarded by the people in their endeavor to find a competent man to fill the office of Executive. The South, it is true, would not be likely to support Mr. Chase, although Gen. Grant might be deemed unobjectionable. But it is evident that the Southern States The Cincinneti Gazette of yesterday.

speaking of money and busine ters there says:

Business Matters.

"Excessive stringency is still the pre-valing feature, and although there is not quite as much paper offered to-day, still there is more than bankers are able to take. As far as bankers are able to accommodate their depositors, it is done at the regular rates of 8a10 ne at the regular rates of 8a10 It is done at the regular rates of $a10 per cent., but money in the open market is worth 12a15 per cent., and first-class paper is current at these rates. In fact, the rate with borrowers is not much of an object, if they can only obtain money for a short time. Some call loans, with ample collaterals are made at 10 per cent. Of course, in times like these, when it is difficult for strong houses with the best credit to obtain money, there are some weak ones which must go by the board. the means of assuaging out animostics and reconciling a people who now seem to be permanently estranged from their fellow citizens in the prosperous States. It has already been half seriously pro-posed that the names of Grant and Lee should be placed on the same "ticket;" and, if this crade embodiment of the tire is not likely to be accorded, some THE school census of Cincinnati has just been completed. Supposing thirty three per cent. of the population to be between the ages of five and twenty-one years, this would show an aggrelifes is not likely to be accepted, some wise modification of it may yet recommend Itself to the people.

There are many forcible considerations which must recommend General Grant to the nation above all other competitors. In the present condition of the country what is wasted more than anything cleas is a strong man at the head of the administration. No man can be that in these days who has not the good will of the people on his side and the army at his back. Of weak or compliant Presidents there have been plenty, and a firm President is an obstruction to the business of the country, if he represents yiews which are obnexious to the material of control of the material of the material of control of the material of control of the material of control of the material of gate population of 329,379. Taking the safer estimate of two and a half persons to each individual rated in the school census, the total number of inhabitants would be 274,457.
